

Early American Studies
An Interdisciplinary Journal
VOLUME 11, ISSUE 3 (FALL 2013)

Special Issue:
Ireland, America, and Mathew Carey

Contents

Special Issue Introduction CATHY MATSON AND JAMES N. GREEN	395
Mathew Carey, Ireland, and the “Empire for Liberty” in America MAURICE J. BRIC	403
“A Reciprocity of Advantages”: Carey, Hamilton, and the American Protective Doctrine STEPHEN MEARDON	431
Mathew Carey’s Learning Experience: Commerce, Manufacturing, and the Panic of 1819 CATHY MATSON	455
The Statistical Turn in Early American Political Economy: Mathew Carey and the Authority of Numbers MARTIN ÖHMAN	486
Trans-Atlantic Migration and the Printing Trade in Revolutionary America JOSEPH M. ADELMAN	516
“I was always dispos’d to be serviceable to you, tho’ it seems I was once unlucky”: Mathew Carey’s Relationship with Benjamin Franklin JAMES N. GREEN	545
Furious Booksellers: The “American Copy” of the Waverley Novels and the Language of the Book Trade JOSEPH REZEK	556
Afterword: Why Should We Listen to Mathew Carey? MARTIN J. BURKE	583