

Early American Studies

An Interdisciplinary Journal

VOLUME 8, NUMBER 1 (WINTER 2010)

The Atlantic World of Print in the Age of Franklin

Contents

Introduction	1
GUEST EDITORS JAMES N. GREEN AND ROSALIND REMER
Reading and Radicalization: Print, Politics, and the American Revolution	5
ERIC SLAUTER
The Revolution in Popular Publications: The Almanac and New England Primer , 1750–1800	41
PATRICK SPERO
Between Script and Specie: Cadwallader Colden’s Printing Method and the Production of Permanent, Correct Knowledge	75
JOHN DIXON
“[Those with] Great Abilities Have Not Always the Best Information”: How Franklin’s Transatlantic Book-Trade and Scientific Networks Interacted, ca. 1730–1757	94
NICK WRIGHTSON
Defining the Right Side of Virtue: Crowd Narratives, the Newspaper, and the Lee–Mercer Dispute in Rhetorical Perspective	120
ALEXANDER B. HASKELL
The Printer and the “Peasant”: Benjamin Franklin and Pierre-André Gargaz, Two Philosophers in Search of Peace	146
ELLEN R. COHN
Liberation Technology: Black Printed Protest in the Age of Franklin	173
RICHARD S. NEWMAN
Afterword	199
DAVID D. HALL	